RAY HAMILTON'S WIDOW SUEING FOR THE ESTATE.

She also Wants Baby Beatrice—An Aged Gentleman Murdered by Jurymen near the Courthouse—Desperate Jump for Liberty, Etc., Etc.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—Eva Hamilton, who claims to be the widow of Robert Ray Hamilton, will bring suit next week for a widow's dower in the Hamilton estate. She will also claim the custody of baby Beatrice. None of Eva Hamilton's relatives or friends went to the state prison to see her when she was released on Tuesday. Colonel Fuller, Mrs. Hamilton's counsel, says: "If Mrs. Hamilton can prove that she is the widow of Robert Ray Hamilton, she is sure to get one-third interest in his real estate. The divorce proceedings are dead and there is no doubt our winning the suit for a dower. No provision was made for her in the will. I do not know what the real estate amounts to, but have heard that it is estimated at about $400,000. Mrs. Hamilton also claims baby Beatrice as her child. When I have had time to consult with her and draw up papers the suit will be begun." Babe Beatrice has, under the provisions of Hamilton's will, got $1200 a year for her support. Sherman W. Knowles, guardian of baby Beatrice, says that he will not tell Eva Hamilton where the child is.

Murderous Jurymen.

WYNWOOD, Ind., Nov. 27.—When the rollcall on Tuesday morning was answered in the courtroom at Tiscoming, two petit jurors, Robert Brown and Will Factor, were arrested, charged with the murder of Wm. Albertson, by the grand jury. The scene of the murder was about two hundred yards from the capitol building, near the highway. It is evident that Albertson made a desperate fight for life. When the body was found, hogs had eaten the face off. His body was literally hacked to pieces with a knife, while the right hand showed three gashes on the palm, where he had clutched the knife to save himself. One gash showed that while he was struggling with one assailant the other stabbed him from behind on the spine. When arrested the petit jurors' clothing was very bloody and their hats also. They stoutly denied the charge. It is not creating as much excitement as would be supposed.

Mysterious Death.

PLEASANTVILLE, N. J., Nov. 27.—Early this morning the village of English creek was thrown into a state of excitement when it was announced that Aaron Alberton, an aged citizen, had suddenly died during the night. He was not suffering from heart trouble or any other disease when he retired, and the general impression is that he was murdered by being choked to death. Albertson had as a room mate, Somers S. Blackman, a young man of ill repute. Early last evening he went into Somers' joint and became intoxicated, and when in that state he is considered a dangerous man. When Albertson was found by the neighbors this morning he was lying doubled up across his bed. There were many evidences that a hard struggle had taken place. An inquest will be held to-morrow morning. In the meantime much excitement prevails. Blackman is still living in the house with the dead body of Albertson and a sharp watch is being kept on Blackman for fear he will flee from town as he seems to be aware that a great deal of responsibility rests on his shoulders for the death of Albertson.

O'Brien and Parnell.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Nov. 26.—Representatives of the United Press called on William O'Brien, this evening, and presented a cablegram stating that the assembled Nationalists in London were expecting to hear from the delegates in America before the meeting adjourned O'Brien said the the subject was a delicate one, and he did not care to express himself further than was contained in the following dispatch, which he sent, this afternoon, to his friends on the other side of the water. "In view of our obligations to Mr. Gladstone, the interest of our cause and the responsibilities we have contracted to the Irish tenantry on the faith of the general election fought in cordial alliance with the Liberal party, I would earnestly recommend the party to open immediate friendly communications with Mr. Gladstone." Mr. O'Brien added that he had wired Mr. Dillon the substance of the foregoing message. Mr. Dillon will join O'Brien here to-morrow.

A Desperate Prisoner.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Nov. 27.—Fillmore Maxon, who jumped from a train to escape from a Deputy United States Marshal, died yesterday. He was under indictment for perjury and was being brought from Cario to Springfield for trial. When near this city the prisoner asked permission to go to the stove and warm his feet. The train was running forty miles an hour. The prisoner stopped at the stove for a moment and then made a dash for the door. He leaped from the platform and was supposed to have escaped uninjured, as nothing more was heard of him until Sunday night, when he was discovered in a ditch, beside the track, in an unconscious condition.

They Will Not Split.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 27.—Wm. O'Brien said to a United Press reporter this morning: "The Irish members of this country will meet at the Burnet House to-morrow. I have no answer from England, and can say but little till after the meeting to-morrow, but I don't think Parnell will resign. I will say this much, however, that the Tories will be disappointed in their hopes that the Irish-Liberal party will split when this matter is finally settled. It will be as strong as ever. I do not know now what the settlement will be."

SPORTING NOTES.

Brief Resume of Sporting Matters Here and Elsewhere.

THE BIGGEST ON RECORD.

"Seventy-five thousand dollars for one meeting," is a new and startling announcement in the harness-racing world, but C. W. Williams, who has made the town of Independence famous, has a way of doing new and startling things. It was a new and startling thing to breed, train and drive a three-year old to the head of the stallion list, and to sell him for the highest price ever paid for a horse; to put three three-year-olds in the 2.20 list in one season, and to follow it up by giving what the world regarded as a hopelessly broken-down four-year-old stallion a record of 2.13½. Contemporaneously with these achievements he sprung upon the world his new-fangled track, which takes rank as the fastest trotting course in the world, and is destined to revolutionze to a degree that it would be unsafe now to estimate the system of track building. Williams gave a summer meeting at Independence that lifted that hitherto unpretentious town into national importance, and records fell upon the pages of turf history like leaves in autumn. The fall meeting at Independence was little less brilliant, as our recent issues have shown, and the experience of the summer demonstrated that rich purses, a good track and energetic management in trotting projects are always sure of success. When Mr. Williams announced that $38,000 was the amount to be raced for at the inaugural meeting at the now famous Independence track there was much conservative and wise head shaking, but he got a magnificent sum and made money into the bargain. And now, with unexampled enterprise—an enterprise that at the first blush may seem almost audacious—he announces a trotting meeting for his little Iowa town next August, at which the unprecedented sum of $75,000 will be given to the harness performers. In 1873 Buffalo gave $67,000 for its grand circuit events and this has remained until now the largest amount ever given at a trotting meeting. The Independence association announces already a partial stake programme for its August, 1891, meeting, embracing nine stakes of $5000 each, the balance to be announced later. Four of these are colt stakes, one is a stake for five-year-olds, and the balance are class stakes. The programme opens with a $5000 stake for yearlings, foals of 1890, divided into four payments, falling due January 1, March 1, May 1 and July 1, of $12.50 each, the race to be at mile heats, with an hour between each heat. We may, however, question the wisdom of asking mere babies to repeat at a distance of a mile. The conditions of payment in the stake for two-years-olds are the same as for yearlings, except that each payment is $25. A total of $100 on easy conditions is certainly liberal terms of entry to a $5000 stake. Each payment in the stakes for three-year-olds, four-year-olds and five-year-olds, is respectively $37.50, $50 and $62.50, and the later amount is also the quarterly payment in the stakes for 2:30 trotters, 2:30 pacers, 2:20 trotters and 2:20 pacers, the dates of payment in all being uniform, viz., January 1, March 1, May 1 and July 1. The entries to these stakes close January 1, when the horses are named and first payment made. Each stake will be divided into three moneys, the winner receiving 60 per cent., the second horse 25 per cent. and the third 15 per cent. When the full programme is announced additional stakes of from $5000 to $10,000 will be provided, with purses from $1000 to $2000 in value, the whole to aggregate $75,000, and we are sure it is no exaggeration to say that it will be the greatest programme ever arranged for a harness meeting.

GOLF BY CANDLE LIGHT.

Of the many anecdotes told by the gallant captain (Horatio Ross) to his friends there is none which will interest Scottish ears, in particular, so much as the following description of a game of golf by night: At the race ordinary at Montrose, Lord Kennedy and, the late, Mr. Cruikshank, of Langley park, both good players "got up a match of three holes for £500 each hole, and agreed to play it then and there. It was about ten or half-past ten p.m., and quite dark. No light was allowed except one lantern placed in the hole and another carried by the attendant of the player, in order that they might ascertain to whom the ball struck belonged. We all moved down to the golf course to see this curious match. Boys were placed along the course, who were quite accustomed to the game, to listen to the flight of the balls and to run to the spot where a ball struck and rested on the ground. I do not remember which of the players won the odd hole; it was won I know by only one hole. But the most remarkable part of the match was that they made out their holes with much the same number of strokes as they usually did when playing in daylight. I think on an average, that they took about five or six strokes in daylight and in the dark six or seven. They were, however, in the constant habit of playing over the Montrose court." Perhaps golf is, upon the whole, the surest athletic game that can be played, notwithstanding all its chances and "hazards;" a man may be in play or out of play, but scarcely ever makes a total fiasco, as happens occasionally to the best of sportsmen with his gun.—From "Sporting Anecdotes," by "Ellangowan."

WILL PARNELL RESIGN?

THE QUESTION AGITATING THE MINDS OF BRITISHERS.

Difference of Opinion Expressed in the Dispatches—Comments by Conservative and Liberal Papers—Gladstone Cheered as he Entered the House.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—It has transpired that during the morning a strong feeling in favor of the retirement of Parnell from the leadership of the party has been developed. It was, however, vigorously opposed by the minority.

It is impossible to exaggerate the political excitement now prevailing in consequence of the Parnell episode. Such a crisis has never been witnessed in English politics before, not even on the occasion of the overthrow of a party by a vote in the House or at the polls. In fact, the fate of both Liberals and the party of home rule in Ireland is recognized as depending upon the outcome of the present imbroglio. The club houses and lobbies are filled with groups of earnest debaters, nothing but the all absorbing subject being heard of. It may be said without hesitation that Mr. Gladstone's letter to Mr. Morley has raised him to a pinnacle of his countrymen's estimation. Never has the "Grand Old Man" shown his true grandeur in so striking a manner as by this letter, which may very easily prove to be the death warrant of his prospects of ever again reaching the premiership, but which places him in the front rank of those who would rather be right than be rulers.

The Times and one or two other papers which have always shown malignity towards Mr. Gladstone, are the only ones which venture to withhold their meed of praise for his conduct on this occasion, and their carping voices are drowned by the acclamations which come up from all parts of the country, and in which men of all parties join alike. As Mr. Gladstone entered the house to-day, he was greeted by a sudden whirlwind of applause that seemed to startle him with its unusual vigor. It came from both party benches, Conservatives joining Liberals in paying the tribute to the man who had so signally demonstrated that no consideration of personal or party exigency could shake him from the performance of his duty. The contrast between the position occupied by Mr. Gladstone and that in which Mr. Parnell now finds himself, is a very painful one. It is but just to state that Parnell is not himself wholly responsible for the last mishap to his reputation. His acceptance of re-election to the leadership of the Irish party at the moment when Mr. Gladstone had already signified his desire for his retirement makes Parnell's action seem to place his personality above the interests of his country.

Justin McCarthy has not succeeded to the satisfaction of his colleagues in explaining why he did not show Parnell Mr. Morley's letter before the opening of yesterday's Nationalist meeting. It seems evident he did not make the Irish leader fully aware of the peremptory nature of Mr. Gladstone's communication. That Parnell has met with a great blow since yesterday is apparent to all who observed him upon his entry into the House yesterday and again to-day. Then he seemed as bright as ever, while to-day he was pale and haggard, with all the appearance of a man suffering under the burden of a recent and cruel blow. He declined to enter into any conversation and excused himself as speedily as possible from all who greeted him, while Mr. Gladstone was displaying unusual activity, nervously and almost excitably darting to and fro greeting his friends. Parnell, after entering the House unnoticed, remained silent and motionless with his hat drawn over his eyes, but, intently watching the movements of those around him.

The postponement of final action in regard to the Gladstone letter until Monday by to-day's meeting of the Parnellites reveals the existence of dissension in the ranks; but all the Irish members who are willing to talk to-night declare that Parnell must and will retire. The delay is attributed by some to a desire to hear from the envoys in America before taking final action, but this is hardly more than a matter of courtesy to absent leaders, though it is possible that they might have some important information to communicate as to the effect of the one or other course at home upon the flow of funds from America. British donations to the fund in aid of the struggle for Irish home rule have entirely ceased since the O'Shea trial, and but for contributions from the American National League would be in a moribund condition for lack of money. The government has proclaimed the league in portions of the counties of Fermanagh, Donegal and Waterford. Mr. Gladstone, it is said, will attend the sessions of parliament this week, and then should Parnell remain in the Irish leadership, he will retire to Hawarden for the winter, leaving Mr. Morley to look out for the British Liberal interests.

The Pall Mall Gazette (Liberal), referring to Parnell's retention of the leadership, asks: "Is Parnell mad?" and says: "By Parnell resuming his re-election as head of a party by concealing from meeting Gladstone's ultimatum, he has added one more act of duplicity to the wretched business in which he has been engaged, and it is high time that he repented."

The Truth, Henry Labouchere's paper, to-day, abandons Mr. Parnell. A consultation was held between Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Morley to consider the situation created by the re-election of Parnell.

Feeling Among the Party.

LONDON, Nov. 26—The feeling among the Irish party that they were yesterday deceived as to the true situation is now so strong that the motion for the expulsion of Parnell will probably be offered at to-day's meeting of the Nationalists should he refuse to resign. Gladstone is busily engaged in holding frequent conferences with his colleagues.

During the conference of members of the Irish party to-day, the approaches to the meeting room were carefully guarded against possible intrusion. At the door stood an Irish commoner ready to prevent the entrance of any unauthorized person.

Mr. Parnell entered the room amid the utmost silence, and as soon as he had taken the chair and opened the meeting he explained that the meeting had been called by him upon a requisition of 38 members of the party. The doors were closed for an hour and a half and when they were thrown open it was learned that a great divergence of opinion had been manifested throughout the discussion. When the meeting adjourned it was to re-assemble at five o'clock this evening.

Yesterday's Meeting.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—At this morning's meeting of the Nationalist members, Barry of Wexford and Collins of Rosscommon, were the first to urge Parnell to retire. McCarthy followed in a similar strain. He spoke eloquently of Parnell's sacrifice, but said Gladstone's letter had materially changed the situation. Lane, of Cork, appealed to Parnell to think of the Irish tenants waiting anxiously for the promised change of government which was to better their condition. At 5 o'clock, Sheehy took up the same line of argument pursued by Lane. John O'Connor strongly favored Gladstone's retention of office. Several members objected to postponing the decision until Monday, but the majority agreed to the proposal. The conferences to-day have proved that much difference of opinion exists in the party, and have also shown that Parnell is resolved to remain in office unless the party passes a vote of no confidence. After a long discussion in which opinions were given candidly Parnell gained a positive victory though the members advocating his retention deprecated a final decision until the opinion of the entire party should be recorded. An adjournment was finally taken in order to afford time for obtaining the views of absent members It is probable that at Monday's meeting Parnell will again be urged by a section of his supporters to retire, but already a reaction in his favor appeared, and if a vote were taken it is expected that a large majority will be on his side. It is stated that at an earlier meeting, to-day, at least fifty members favored his retention of the leadership. Several others, however, wrote out their resignations, to have them ready for presentation in the event of a decision that Parnell should remain.

Advances at the Close.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—The stock market closed firm. Consols money and account show an advance of 1⅛ as compared with the official closing prices of yesterday. American securities showed an advance ranging from ⅜ to 1⅛ except Pennsylvania, which closed ⅛ lower.

Action Withdrawn.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—In the Irish court of chancery suit was brought by Mrs. O'Shea against her husband, Captain O'Shea, last spring for the enforcement of her marriage settlement, and to force the captain to transfer to her certain interests which were menaced by proceedings in bankruptcy taken against him. To-day the action was withdrawn.

Disastrous Explosion.

ST. JOHN, N. B., Nov. 25.—The boiler of O. D. Button's mill exploded to-day, killing six men and severely injuring several others. One of the several boilers in the mill was blown through the roof and out in the bay, 500 feet distant. James Blair was on top of it drying himself when it exploded. He was blown to pieces and five other mill hands instantly killed. The mill took fire and was destroyed. The explosion was caused by water being turned on in the boiler and neglected.

O'Connor Wanted at Home.

DUBLIN, Nov. 27.—Freeman's Journal, in commenting on the crisis which seems to have been reached by the Nationalist party, suggests that O'Connor, now in the United states should return home at once. The Journal also says that the Nationalist party should await O'Connor's return before taking any action with regard to the retention of Parnell.

The Clergy Opposed.

DUBLIN, Nov. 27.—A movement is on foot having for its object the holding of a number of meetings throughout Ireland on Sunday next for the purpose of expressing confidence in Parnell. The clergy are opposed to the movement, and openly deprecate any such action.

Davitt's Opinion.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—Davitt's paper the Labor World in its issue to morrow will puolish an appeal to the Irish race at home and abroad in which Davitt implores them to rise to show themselves equal to the present emergency. He says there is no hope for Parnell to remain as leader of the party by which Ireland's cause is to be saved. He declares that the Irish party contains more than one man capable of leading it to victory and that there is sufficient patriotism therein for the following of a leader chosen from their own ranks by the majority of its members. Nevertheless Davitt asserts whatever decision is taken at Monday's adjourned meeting, the Nationalist Irish cause is unperishable. He requests his countrymen to pray God for wisdom and courage to guide those upon whom Ireland's hopes are centered.

CHAPTER XXIII.

GLIMPSES OF A BURIED HISTORY.

Meanwhile Mr. Gryce was engaged upon quite a different search. Convinced that a murder and not a suicide had taken place in Genevieve Gretorex's room, he found it had become his duty to discover what motive this petted child of fortune could have had for desiring the death of so humble a person as her dressmaker.

He went, therefore, to work upon this matter with his usual vigor and precision, his method of procedure having one point in similarity with that of Dr. Cameron. This was that it started with a fact of which he had spoken to no one, and which dated back to the moment when Mrs. Gretorex first heard from his lips that her daughter had been interested in a person by the name of Farley.

That name—he was sure of it—had awakened memories in the elder woman's breast which were connected with some secret she sought to hide and which it disturbed her to think had been discovered by her daughter. Whatever that secret was, it was evidently one that he ought to make his own.

That there was some connection between them, acknowledged or unacknowledge, his instincts and the whole bearing of Mrs. Gretorex on that memorable day relentlessly told him; and to determine what this was and to set those girls before the world in their true relations to each other, seemed to him the first step towards a correct understanding of the tragedy which had occurred.

In laying his plan of action, the first conclusion he came to was that it was useless to question Mr. Gretorex. She was armed at all points and distrusted him as an inquisitor. To other sources of knowledge than this, he must therefore turn, and the first person he thought of was Mr. Gretorex.

This gentleman, of whom we have seen but little, was socially considered, the husband of Mrs. Gretorex. But amongst men he was an acknowledged power, and in business circles a leader and a demagogue.

He found the great railroad man in his office and he introduced himself simply for what he was, a detective from the police force. Then he at once opened his business by saying:

"You have heard of me, Mr. Gretorex. I was at your house the evening your daughter got married, and I have been there since. My object—" He waited a moment; but polite amazement was all that the countenance of Mr. Gretorex expressed. "My object," resumed Mr. Gryce, "is to learn what I could concerning the Miss Farley which your daughter has been so liberally patronizing."

Mr. Gretorex's lack of polite astonishment gave way to one of equally polite inquiry.

"Miss Farley," he repeated, and there paused. The name seemed to awaken no emotion in him.

"Yes, the girl who was poisoned a few weeks ago; you surely heard your wife speak of her?"

"I have not much time," he remarked, "for trivialties. If Mrs. Gretorex knows anything about this person, she is the one to go to."

"I am glad to hear this," quoth the detective boldly, "for I was afraid this Mildred Farley was in some way connected with your family."

"It is a name I never heard before," he observed, dryly, and turned to his papers again.

Mr. Gryce knew men—he never boasted that he knew women—and in this man he saw abundant vitality, purpose and ambition, but no duplicity. He therefore rose, and, with suitable excuses, bowed himself out, convinced that whatever secret lay concealed beneath the emotion of Mrs. Gretorex at the mention of the name of Farley, it was not one in which her husband had any share.

Disappointed but not discouraged, he would now try and see if he could not trace the connection he sought, from the Farley end of the chain. For, though both Mrs. Farley and her daughter were dead, they had left their belongings behind them, and amongst those belongings were undoubtedly packets of old letters, any one of which might give him the information he sought.

To Mrs. Olney's house he therefore repaired, and after some talk with that lady he was directed to an old chest in the attic, which being emptied, produced more than one packet of just such letters as he desired to see; old letters with discolored writing, some of them bearing the date of ten years back and some of them of twenty. With these in his hand he felt that he had the key to the widow's history, and going back into the room provided for his use by the accommodating landlady, he set about perusing them with all the care and circumspection of which he was capable.

They were from various persons, most of them women, and it was not long before he discovered that those signed with the name of Annie showed the most familiarity with the widow's affairs, as well as expressed the most affectionate interest in her. To these therefore he paid the most heed, and was soon rewarded for his efforts by gaining a very good idea of Mrs. Farley's early life and circumstances.

They were such as are very apt to follow a runaway match such as her's had evidently been. A few months later and the sickness had increased and the poverty deepened; then some blow, dreadful but keen, called out the hurried line, "O, my poor darling, bear up till I come; you shall not endure this fearful grief alone!" after which there was a lapse of letter writing on the part of this person for months, and when it was taken up again, the frequent expressions of sympathy for her correspondent's widowhood, showed what this grief had probably been; though there were others and less comprehensible allusions to some great sacrifice she had made, which threw an air of mystery over this portion of the correspondence that for some time the detective found it impossible to penetrate. Not till he read in a much later letter, "I hope your sweet little Mildred is well; I wonder if the other one has flourished as rapidly and looks as well," did the light he was seeking, break in upon this seemingly commonplace history. "I have seen your child, I have seen her and she is as much like Mildred as any little lady brought up in the lap of luxury could be like a child who has not always had two pairs of shoes for her feet. I met her as she was going to school. I was on the sidewalk in front of the house and she passed so near me I could have caught her in my arms. Why didn't I? She would only have thought me crazy, and that wouldn't have done me any harm, while the letting her go by me as if her sweet body did not contain a drop of my blood, did. But her rich dress and the haughty way in which she held her head, over-awed me, and I did not even follow her down the street, though I own my heart went after her almost as much as if she had been my own child. What grief, what hoping must be yours! I appreciate it now that I have seen with my eyes this facsimile of the darling you have retained for your own solace." And this letter was signed Annie like the rest, and bore a date of only ten years back.

After this Mr. Gryce was not astonished to find a change in the direction of the epistles addressed to Mrs. Farley. From being sent to a small town in Ohio, they were now inscribed to a certain number in Bleecker street, New York. The widow had moved herself and child to the great metropolis.

At last, words of condolence took the place of words of hope, as the two struggles culminated; followed by sudden congratulations that she had found strength in her weakness, and had not only been saved from breaking a most solemn oath, but had found in the child who shared her life and fortunes, a help and comfort, that would yet compensate her for all she had lost and suffered.

And then a sudden failure on the part of Annie to write; with hurried lines, manifestly from some other member of this same Annie's household, in which hope was expressed that Mrs. Farley was well, and news given of the invalid, as Annie was henceforth called; winding up with this single injunction in the old handwriting: "Do be careful; Mildred's happiness as well as that of the other, depends upon keeping things as they are. Remember your oath."

And the packet was exhausted. But what had he not learned? Or, at least, what was he not at liberty to surmise? Procuring the date at which the first mention of Mildred was made, and storing up in his deep memory the name of the town from which came these letters signed Annie, he left Mrs. Olney, with a sense of great professional complacency, notwithstanding the secret dread which sprang from his benevolent nature, of being upon the track of a crime destined to plunge a beautiful woman and a noble man into a pit of shame and dishonor.

What he did with the facts he now gleaned and what result followed his pursuit of the unknown Annie to her place of residence, I leave him to tell for himself in the ensuing chapter.

SYMPATHY WASTED.

How Street Gamins Fooled Many Kind-Hearted Persons.

It is seldom that the New York street urchin fails to get amusement out of any thing where he sees the chance. Some youngsters saw an opportunity recently in the union of the following elements: A pair of trousers, an old jacket and vest, a hat and some straw. The straw was put in the other elements, and the whole, when completed, made a very fair specimen of the genus "tramp." The boys carried the figure around to a neighboring church, and placed it in a position which was skillfully intended to give the impression to passers-by of a fellow-being in agony. Then they hid to watch developments, says the New York Times. A lady and gentleman passed the church. "Oh, look at that poor fellow, John! He seems to be ill," remarked the lady. The small boys didn't say any thing, but kept their eyes on "John." "John," who was a courtly cavalier of the olden days, benevolently went up and touched the figure, saying: "What's the matter with you, my man?" He did not wait to get an answer, but left suddenly, and his departure was punctuated by various cat calls and scoffing remarks.

Many persons passed the figure, and many, overcome by emotions of pity, when up and spoke words of kind encouragement to it, patted it on the shoulder, shook it, and then went away quickly, accompanied by cries of "Git de ambulance fur de man, boss! Call der cop! He's McGinty's brother, boss!" and various other expressions of Americanized Anglo-Saxon that were more or less forcibly understood by those who heard them.

The urchins kept it up until one of their number suggested carrying the figure to the park and "make a soo'cide or murder." The idea was seized, and the poor agonized figure was hurried from the church steps and borne off into the surrounding darkness with a yell that made a nervous old lady who was standing on the street corner shiver and exclaime to her aged companion: "Laudy! look at those boys a-tormentin' that poor man."

STREET CAR COURTESY.

A Few Rules That Should Be Observed by Travelers on All Lines.

When you enter a street car place your parcel or bag beside you, as it is entitled to the room of a passenger, says the Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Always stand on the rear platform of a street car and chin to the conducto about the lady passengers. It show your manners.

Sometimes you see a person sitting with one foot resting upon his knee. This is not to discommode others, but only to protect his corn patch.

When a lady with a babe in her arms enters a car don't get up; bury your head in a newspaper and read between the lines that a woman who takes a child out for an airing has no business to get into a crowded street car, as there is always danger of the babe catching mumps or measles.

Always cross your legs while riding in a street car, particularly if you wear barber-pole socks, and then the ladies brush the dust from your shoes as they pass by.

If a lady and gentleman enter a car together and you are asked to move up a little, don't do it. It is not necessary that they should sit beside each other, and the conductor has no rights that you are bound to respect.

You can generally tell a dude by the size of his cane. Entering a car he should always carry his stick under his arm. The ladies having a care for it, the owner will notice him more favorably.

The selfish man always spreads himself out and reads his paper with stolid indifference. To move up a little he might lose the thread of the subject in hand; therefore it is best not to disturb him.

Explains the Difficulty.

If you want to show your absent friends where you live, or if you want to explain some topographical matter there is no better way of doing it than by sending one of T. N. Hibben & Co.'s maps. This shows everything in and around Victoria, and explains everything at a glance. Besides the large map, there is one on a smaller scale, price 50 cents, suitable for sending away.

AFRAID OF BANKS.

A Divorced Wife Loses $15,000 Alimony Hidden in Her Bosom.

Why is it that the majority of women are so afraid of a bank? asks the New York Star. They are only satisfied with money; checks, bank-books, or other evidence of money do not please them. When I read about the woman a few days ago who put her money under the waist of her dress and then lost it, I was reminded of a similar loss, only of a larger amount, which occurred in this city a few years ago. After much litigation in the Supreme Court an ill-used wife got a decree of divorce and about $15,000 alimony. The lawyers and the wife and her mother met in one of the small rooms of the court-house and settled. The husband's lawyer had a certified check for the alimony, but the wife wouldn't touch it; she wanted money. In vain did her own counsel assure her that the check was better than money; it was so much safer. Her husband's treatment of her had been cruel, and he had fought her application for divorce in such a mean way that she had come to distrust every thing he proposed. She believed that the check was a trick, and she wouldn't have it. So the two lawyers went out, got the check cashed, and came back with the money. She took it, carefully deposited it in her bosom, smilingly observing that no thieves could get hold of it there.

She and her mother left the court-house and took the Sixth avenue elevated for Forty-second street. When they got home the money was gone. Womanlike, they believed that the judge who decreed the alimony could in some way make the loss good, and they rushed back to the court-house and obtained an interview with him. He is one of the tenderest-hearted men in the world, and he has since described the meeting as one of the most painful he ever had. The loss of the money rendered them absolutely penniless, and there were two children whose custody had been given to the mother, the father being worth less in every respect except pecuniarily. The wife cried and the mother sobbed. The judge explained to them that the case was closed; that final judgment had been rendered and complied with; that they had insisted upon taking bills instead of a certified check, which had been offered to them, and that they had only themselves to blame for the loss. He didn't convince the excited and heart-broken women by such arguments. Finally, there being no other way of getting rid of them, the judge agreed to send to the husband and lay the case before him. He was not called upon in any manner to do this, nor, in fact, had he any right to; but his magnanimity and pity caused him to. I never heard that he succeeded, however, and am under the impression that the wife never got any thing more from her husband. He had paid the court's decree and he let her go—to starve, if it should so happen.

An Anecdote of Douglas.

The late Beverly Tucker was a genuine F. F. V. He was handsome, popular and the best story teller in Washington. He was a great friend of Stephen A. Douglas, and one day, when Tucker was walking down Pennsylvania avenue, the Little Giant overtook him, threw his arm around his shoulder and exclaimed: "Bev, old boy, I love you!" "But, will you always love me?" asked Tucker. "If I don't, may I be damned. What do you want me to do? Say what you will, and I'll remember it." "Well," said Tucker, "when you get to be President, all I want you to do for me is to choose some public place like this, put your arm around my neck just as you are doing now, call me 'Bev,' and tell me you love me." The bargain was made, and it wasn't the Little Giants fault that it wasn't carried out.

THE CRY OF MILLIONS

OH, MY BACK!

STOP IT NOW,

SOON IT WILL BE TOO LATE.

I have been troubled many years with disease of the kidneys and have tried many different remedies and have sought aid from different physicians without relief. About the 15th of April I was suffering from a very violent attack that almost prostrated me in such a manner that I was bent over. When I sat down it was almost impossible for me to get up alone, or to put on my clothes, when kind Providence sent Dr. Henley, with the DRGOON KIDNEY TEA, to my hotel. I immediately commenced using the tea. It had an almost miraculous effect, and to the astonishment of all the guests at the hotel, in a few days, I am happy to state, that I was a new man. I will recommend the tea to all afflicted as I have been.

LEACH RIVER MINING.

THE TRIALS MET WITH BY ONE OF THE MANY PARTIES.

Victoria Deserted in the Rush for Gold—Incidents Connected with the Trip—Salting the Pan a Failure—A Mysterious Murder.

A great deal has been written and talked of in regard to the excitement caused in Victoria on account of the rush to Cariboo, Omineca and Cassiar for gold, but the little rush to Leach river in 1864 has been very seldom mentioned. At that time Victoria was a very small place to what it is at present, and the inhabitants, who were ever eager to grasp at news of big finds, had fortunes made in their own minds, when report came that a few hardy prospectors had made a big find almost at their doors, only about 23 miles away. A great many were old miners who had traversed California in '49 and the Fraser in '58, but nevertheless they were as excited as the young Englishmen who had come from England seeking their fortunes. Things were rather quiet in Victoria at the time, and all were anxious to start out for the new gold fields. Picks, shovels, pans, provisions and clothing were quickly got ready, and Capt. Wm. Moore with the steamer Alexandria had a full passenger list on every trip for several weeks. The steamer was loaded with anxious men bound to Sooke harbor, whence they made their way through the bush to the new mines. Store keepers sent their clerks out to stake off claims, while others were sent to start stores or look into the prospects of starting. A gold commissioner was appointed by the government and with his retinue of servants, three Indians, he quickly started for the mines, pitched his tent and recorded claims. The majority of the excited inhabitants took advantage of Capt. Moore's mode of transportation, but some packed their horses and themselves in Victoria and started out over the mountains via Goldstream. True the excitement was not as great as the original one in '58, but nevertheless it must not be forgotten that the majority of those who went to Leach river were young men who had never seen a gold mine before, and were not used to the business of traveling through the bush where not even a trail showed them the way.

Among those who were the first to start out was a party of forty men, some of whom are now our most prominent citizens, made up of dentists, clerks sent by the bosses, blacksmiths, counter jumpers, old miners and men of all trades. They went down to Sooke harbor with Capt. Moore and on reaching that place they were fortunate enough to meet with a prospector who had come out that day for a sack of flour. There was no trail and the party gladly accepted the offer of the miner to lead them to the mine, but after happenings proved that he knew as little about the bush as the party did. They had got well into the woods and, being tired out after a few hours travel, a stop was made when all gladly availed themselves of a good rest. Sitting down the members of the little band chatted over their prospects at the new mines and the time slipped fastly by. At last the packs were on the backs again and the party were about to start when a disagreement arose as to which was the right way to go, some of them saying one and some another way. They had lost their bearings and so a long while was lost in trying to decide which was the right way. None had, although some were old miners, thought of the river, which of course they only had to follow to find the point they were so anxious to reach. This idea was a long while in coming to them and when it did it was through a clerk who had never been through the bushes before in his life. The tramp was a tedious one, but the little band had their hopes renewed several times by meeting prospectors who had struck it rich and were making for Victoria to buy provisions. Among those who was met was Mr. Booth, a colored man, who had an immense nugget which he proudly showed to the party, who after viewing it one by one, grabbed up their packs and started on a run over logs and through the thick brush. The trip occupied two whole days, but the gold hunters were undaunted and as soon as the place was sighted they scrambled to work, some with their pen knives and the luckier ones with their picks and shovels. Lots of gold was taken out, but not in large enough quantities to justify a long stay of the party referred to here, although others stayed for over two years and in fact the place is still being worked by the Gordon Hydraulic company.

Some of the party, however, stayed and the clerks opened out stores which, however, did not last more than a few months, for although the place was visited by several thousand men not more than a hundred were there at one time and that in the first few weeks of the excitement.

A portion of the party who returned to Victoria in about two weeks from the time they started met several other parties among them one led by the late Mr. Francis, a colored man, who afterwards owned a large clothing business in Portland. He was at that time proprietor of a second hand store in Victoria and seemed to be anxious to advertise his business for there he was in a thick brush dressed in a fine broad cloth suit, white shirt and a silk hat. By the time he reached Kennedy Flats the hat and clothes looked very much as though they had been through the war before being sold to him.

This excitement soon died out only to be replaced by a little rush to Goldstream which however did not live long, except in the minds of a few who started and sold shares in quartz mining companies. One of these companies did a great deal of work but did not profit much by it.

There was one family however who did not want the excitement to be too short lived, as they expected to draw the population of San Francisco up here to deal with them. Mr. Shirpster and wife, were the family. They were the owners of a cheap John establishment and in order to make Goldstream boom they laid a scheme to "salt a pan." Mrs. Shirpster cooked a good dinner and invited a lot of men who were around there to partake after which a pan full of dirt was taken out and washed up. The salting part was left to Mrs. Shirpster and about $1 worth of gold was to be slyly slipped in. But what was the use as has been proved by former and later occassions a woman cannot manage a "salting" scheme, so the thing failed in the eyes of the old miners, but those who had never seen gold mining before thought they had "struck it sure." The lady had in her excitement dropped over $20 worth in the pan and "what a washup it was." One looked at the other, old miners suppressed a hearty laugh and greenhorns started to work, but without avail for what is the use of digging if you don't gain anything by it.

These little gold fevers like the more exciting one had their little amusing incidents, and also there were sorrowful ones for a young man lost his life while coming from the diggings with his earnings. He had reached Langford plains when he must have been shot down, although the mystery of his death was never unveiled. He was found on the trail with a bullet hole through him, but by whom it was done no one has been ever able to find out.

BIG LEGAL FEES.

How the Leading Lawyers of New York Tax Their Clients.

The New York Morning Journal gives an account of the fees of some of the ten thousand lawyers of New York and Brooklyn. The following are some of the items: The most widely known and without doubt lucrative law firm in New York is Evarts, Choate & Beaman, with magnificent offices at 152 Wall street. The senior is Senator William M. Evarts, whose active interest during the session of the House is very slight. The Hon. Joseph H. Choate, a host in himself, is the pleader. The firms earings are said to be $500,000 annually. Mr. Choate's fees are enormous. The next in importance is Tracy, McFarland, Boardman & Platt, with offices at 35 Wall street. The senior is Secretary of the Navy, Benjamin F. Tracy, the "counsel." Mr. Frank H. Platt is a son of Senator Thomas C. Platt, while A. B. Boardman is well known as a constitutional lawyer. The clever William M. Ivins has recently allied himself with this firm, which has been interested in the attempt to overthrow Tammany Hall. William W. McFarland is the other partner. The firm's busfness is, by good judges, said to be worth $400,000 annually. Coudert Brothers have a monopoly on the French business. The firm is Charles and Frederick R. Coudert, and its income is not far from $350,000. Its practice is by no means confined, and is very general in its character. The firm of Bangs, Stetson, Tracy & Mac Veagh, of which Grover Cleveland is a recent acquisition, has an income of $300,000. Mr. Cleveland has become a great drawing card, and to him are referred the many big cases, requiring great research. Seward, Da Costa & Guthrie devote their attention almost exclusively to corporation law. Clarence Seward, the head, seldom practices other than in the United States courts. The firm's income is between $250,000 and $300,000. Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll has one of the largest individual practices in New York. It is said of him that he will not accept a retainer of less than $500, with fees running high into the thousands. Colonel Ingersoll is one of the most approachable of the heavy legal lights. His earnings with his pen and legal knowledge are between $75,000 and $100,000 a year. Daniel Dougherty, the "silver-tongued," has two offices, one in New York, the other in Philadelphia. His income is not far from $50,000. The largest firm which devotes a large part of its time to the practice of criminal law is that of Howe & Hummel. William F. Howe, the melter of jurymen's hearts, attends exclusively to the criminal end, while little Abe Hummel delves into the intricate questions of civil practice. Between them they divide $100,000 annually.

A Mighty Smart Dog.

There is a butcher's boy in Seattle who travels around on horseback a great deal that attracts considerable attention. He has a dog, and that animal will perch on the horse's back and ride along the street apparently with as much ease and enjoyment as the boy himself. But when the boy wants to hitch the horse is the time the dog comes in handy. The dog is told to sit down, and the horse is fastened to him, when the two animals are left, to all intents and purposes, in perfect security.

An immense assortment of Kensington Art Squares, all sizes, just received by John Weller, 51 to 53 Fort street.

LESSON IN POLITENESS.

How a Professor Rebuked a High-Strung Boston Damsel.

The late Prof. Morren related once in our hearing a rebuke which he gave to a high-strung Beacon Hill damsel, which worth repeating for the moral it carries, says the Boston Courier. The young lady was one of his pupils and made herself particularly obnoxious by her haughty and even insolent bearing, displaying her contempt for all about her so markedly that it became at last unbearable.

"I knew her mother in France," said the professor, whose broken English there is no need of producing here, "and she was a most exquisitely modest and unassuming woman. But the daughter was so insolent that she had to have a lesson; so I said to her:

"'Will you be so good as to remain after the lesson? I have something to tell you.'

"She staid, and in her haughtiest manner she said: 'You wish to speak to me?'

"'Yes. You are Miss So-and-So?'

"'Yes.'

"'And you live at No. — Beacon street?'

"'Yes.'

"'And your father is Mr. So-and-So?'

"'Yes.'

"'And your mother is the lovely and sweet Mrs. So-and-So I have met in France?'

"'Well?'

"'Oh,' I said, 'you are sure there is no mistake?'

"'No mistake! What do you mean?'

"'I am exceedingly surprised that you come of such a family, and so well-born.'

"'Sir!'

"'I am much surprised. I have been sure you came of a new rich family some parvenu—'

"'Sir!'

"'You think, mademoiselle,' I said, softening my manner, 'that haughtiness is aristocratic? Now, you will pardon an old man if I remind you that the contrary is true. I have known your mother so long that I dare to be frank with you. You have been very insolent in the class.

"'Insolent, monsieur?'

"'Yes, mademoiselle. You have mistaken this for a mark of aristocracy. You would much better copy your mother, your gentle, lady mother.'

"And I made her my best bow and left her to think about it. And she was a good girl afterward; a very good girl."

Robbing Country Towns.

The country towns most subject to visitation by burglars are those which lie on the line of several railroads, and are thus in communication with many different places by various routes. The "cracksmen" arrive from the city by the latest train at night, after the residents are most of them asleep. They have four, five or six hours for their nefarious work, and the earliest trains in the morning take them away with their plunder, before the good people of the town have fairly waked up. It is also to be noted that towns thus abundantly provided with railroad facilities are likely to be prosperous and therefore attractive to thieves. In all places so situated the police should be particularly watchful at and above the various railway stations. Indeed the inhabitants really need just as much police protection as the dwellers in our large cities.

THE PRICE OF TRADE RESTRICTION.

The Vancouver Telegram, discussing trade relations under the heading of the "Price of Reciprocity," thus sets force the policy of Canadian Liberals:

"They demand for Canada the right to negotiate her own commercial treaties without reference to the Imperial government, which is in effect to demand independence. To discriminate against British goods in favor of American, to demand the right to negotiate commercial treaties, would be to assert independence, and invite a rupture with the mother country."

In respect to the last clause in which the Telegram attempts to show why Canada should not negotiate her own treaties, what have we? It is medievalism. It smacks of the time when the subject got down on his knees and humbly inquired of his or her majesty whether or not it was consistent with royal interests that he should make a dollar or two. The TIMES is as loyal to British interests as the next, but it is also loyal to Canadian interests, and it ventures to put the following questions, though not with bated breath: Does the Telegram hold that this great empire of British North America must always remain a fief of the Mother country? Does the Telegram hold that such is possible, however desirable it may be in point of sentiment? Does it not occur to the Telegram that a country that promises at no distant period to contain 20,000,000 of people will scarcely be likely to take its trade policy from any country, no matter how closely bound by ties of consanguinity? Further, we ask the Telegram whether it is prepared in candor to insist that Canada should sacrifice her material interests on the altar of sentiment? Does it hold that, nowithstanding that it is to Canada's interest to trade with the United States, loyalty requires that she should trade with England instead? Has the Telegram yet learned that only a prosperous people remain loyal? Can the Telegram point out a single instance where a colony has remained loyal, except that they were prosperous? Does the Telegram not perceive that so-called disloyalty in Canada to-day has grown out of trade restrictions? We can quite can quite understand that a colony of a few hundred thousand population, and with but limited resources, should be content to take its policy at second hand. In the case of a colony, however, of 5,000,000, with varied, and it might be said, illimitable resources, it strikes us that the taking of a commercial policy at second hand is supremely preposterous. We would impress on the Telegram's mind that loyalty is not a one-sided sentiment. Filial love is excellent but it must be responded to with parental love. It is quite as incumbent upon England to be loyal to her colonies as it is for her colonies to be loyal to her. And to the credit of England, be it said, this is precisely the view she takes of the case. She has learned within the last half century this important lesson: The colonies must be allowed political and commercial latitude. England herself is liberal. English Tories are liberal with respect to their colonial policy. The medieval Tory is extant only in Canada, and his policy has driven a million Canadians to the States, and the exodus still continues. The best friend annexation has at this moment is the mossback Canadian Tory. He is the man who thinks he can make his policy stick, he will have starved, literally starved, Canada into annexation. Disloyalty, in our opinion, is the price of trade restriction with the States. The tremendous migration to that country is irrefragible proof of it.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Ottawa Free Press: A few years ago three members of the Jamaica legislature came to Ottawa to discuss with the Dominion Government the best means of promoting trade between that colony and Canada. They were received so coldly and treated with such scant courtesy by the federal ministers that they went home disgusted, and complaining bitterly of the incivility they met with here. Letters from Jamaica indicate that Mr. FOSTER will be reminded of the manner in which his government treated Jamaica's representatives when he appears in that colony in search of a new market for Canadian products.

A gale blowing, and structurally weak, how does it come about that when the Serpent struck there were only a half dozen men and officers on watch? "So small a watch," observes the Montreal Star, "on a dark and stormy night off a dangerous coast would be useless even in an undermanned merchantman." The smallness of the watch seems to indicate that there was fancied security on board; that, in fact, until the vessel struck she must have been riding out the storm easily. We take it, that under these circumstances structural weakness had nothing to do with the loss of the Serpent. It must have been an error in reckoning.

Since SPROULE was hanged on evidence that at least entitled him to a life sentence, and since BIRCHALL met a similar fate on the strength of evidence which a great many people thought entitled him to escape the gallows, the Chinaman who indubitably stabbed a compatriot to death and who escaped with ten years, offers a startling contrast. Has the learned judge been reading up American criminal jurisprudence that the Chinese assassin escaped so cheaply, or is it because, being a Chinaman and having merely killed a countryman, the majesty of the law has not been especially outraged? We take it that the nationality of the murderer saved him. Hereafter when a white man knifes another to death he will, if he is wise, declare himself a subject of the Chinese empire.

BISMARCK is writing the life of the Kaiser's grandfather WILLIAM I, and the Emperor has demanded to see the proof sheets, which BISMARCK will not grant, vowing that sooner than submit to such dictation he will carry the publication to England. "The demand," it is said, "is not an unfair one." We think it is. It is BISMARCK and not the Emperor who is writing this history. The value of history lies in the estimates of the author. A history collaborated by BISMARCK and the Emperor would scarcely fill the bill as history. If it should turn out that BISMARCK's history does not suit the Emperor, the latter may turn in and have one written to suit himself. TALLEYRAND's memoirs will soon be out. What would they be worth if it were known that they are tinctured with the personality of Napoleon the first? The demand of the Emperor WILLIAM is absurd.

THE TELEGRAPH.

TO THE EDITOR:—My attention has been drawn to your editorial of the 14th, and "Victorian's" letter in your issue of the 15th inst., in both of which some extremely unfair criticisms are made relative to the telegraph service. The only point calling for a reply is the statement made by myself and apparently corroborated by "Victorian," viz., that the rates in vogue, previous to the interruption of the Gulf cable, have been very materially increased through the routing of messages via Portland and Seattle. As the public may possibly be misled by these assertions, if not contradicted, I wish to state that no change has been made in rates, and that messages are accepted and forwarded at the old tariff rates, despite the fact of the increased cost of service. This cost the company pay—not the public. As to the frequency of cable interruptions pointed out by you, permit me to say that this is the first interruption ever experienced on the Gulf cable since it was laid in March, 1881.

Items of Interest Received by Telegraph from Different Points.

D. Gilbert, a well-known politician of Carberry, Man., died yesterday morning after a short illness.

J. M. Williams, registrar of the county of Wentworth, is dead. He represented Hamilton for two terms in the Ontario Legislature.

The total number of cattle from Montreal lost during the recent heavy weather on the Atlantic, was 1,140, which means a loss in money of over $7,400.

The case of M. R. O'Brien, for libel against Prince George of Wales during his visit to Montreal, came up in the court of Queen's Bench yesterday, and was put over until next term.

At the Court of Queen's Bench held at Toronto, the appeal of Arthur Day, who shoved his wife into the Niagara river, was heard. The case was thrown out, and Day will hang on the Dec. 18, if the Ottawa authorities do not intervene.

The faithful horse, regarded as an investment, is one of the most precarious animals on earth. Some time ago a New Zealand sport bought an expensive yearling out of Florence McCarthy, and just as he began to congratulate himself on the prospective value of the animal his purchase fell over a precipice and broke its neck. Then he bought the next yearling out of the same mare, and this costly animal turned a somersault in the paddock and broke its back. After this the speculator grew tired, and concluded that the particular family of horses in question was too much given to calisthenics to be profitable, so he looked on while his particular enemy purchased the next colt which came into the market, and smiled a cynical smile as he thought of the consequences. Only the third animal did not break its neck, and last season it started in eleven races and won them all, and now every time he sees it the maddened speculator opens his mouth wide and lets his impressions explode.

MUNICIPAL MELANGE.

Interesting Items Picked Up at Last Night's Board Meeting.

In drawing the attention of the Board of Aldermen to the fact that a $5000 bonus for a drill shed had been asked for, the Mayor stated that Victoria was the only city in Canada where there was a local military force where a drill shed had not been provided by the city. It was a custom which long-usage had made almost law, although to his mind he thought the Provincial Government should bear part of the expense. For the credit of Victoria, however, he hoped the matter would not be allowed to go by default.

A FINE BOOK.

The annual report of the St. Johns, New Brunswick, board of aldermen, which has been presented to the City Council of Victoria, is a book which shows that St. Johns is a well governed and prosperous city. As an indication of the stability of the city the report is good proof, its municipal finances being in first class condition. The record of crime is low, and the vital statistics show a healthy city. In all ways the book is a credit to the city which issues it, and not least so by reason of the splendid binding. The cover is in leather gilt, richly embossed. On the first cover is the coat of arms of St. Johns, and the words "From the City Council of St. Johns, to the Council of Victoria," all embossed in gold.

OBEY THE LAW.

The question of wharf lighting came up at the meeting, and one of the aldermen asked what had been done in the matter. It was reported that at the last meeting the matter had been left in the hands of the superintendent of police to see that the law was carried out, but no improvement in the lighting had been noticeable. A fatal accident was predicted unless something is soon done.

COAT OF ARMS.

Ald. Holland last night suggested a coat of arms for Victoria city, with a motto. The worthy alderman thinks that Victoria has become metropolitan enough to warrant such a thing. Suggestions for a suitable coat of arms are now in order. How would a blue shield quartered by gold bars look? A ship in one section, denoting commerce; a pile of overflowing money bags, indicative of financial wealth, in another; a seal, couchant in the third; a crossed pen and sword in the fourth, showing that brains and force were available here to defend the city from all foes. A motto in good plain English, "I am the Queen," would be appropriate.

QUITE APPROPRIATE.

A gentleman named Small, of New Jersey, last evening submitted a letter to the board asking for the position of superintendent of the construction of sewerage. From the tone of his letter it might be inferred that he is of the idea that no competent men for the job are available here. One of the aldermen remarked in a quiet voice, "There's nothing small about that applicant."

A LOW OFFER.

One of the tenderers for the Deluge fire hall property last night made the offer of a fraction over $10,000. His worship remarked that the tenderer must have been deeply impressed with the late financial worry in London, as the offer was 100 per cent. too low.

A SUBSTITUTE.

A complaint was received that bad characters and idle young men had a habit of loafing around night's in the dark shadows cast by St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, and asking that an electric light be placed near there. As it is impossible at present to put in another lamp, the power at the house not being sufficient, the next best thing has been done. A police officer has been ordered to patrol near that corner.

TO BE PUT IN ORDER.

The street numbers will be placed in position in the course of a week or so, and then seekers after a specified residence will have some sort of a guide to go by. At present, when looking for a number, the search is a most brain-twisting one, as the numbers are mixed up in a fantastic and irregular way that is calculated to confuse and confound the seeker.

A SLIGHT FALL.

Some of the difficulties in the way of draining the city were shown last evening when Ald. Harrison reported to the board that in one place in James Bay the fall was but one inch in 108 feet. Pure water would hardly run through an inch pipe with that fall, to say nothing of sewage, but Mr. Mohun's plans will deal with the question in a practical way at any event.

A FAVORABLE FUTURE

For Mining Operations—Mr. Morris Moss Returns from Up Country.

Mr. Morris Moss returned from a five weeks' trip up country Tuesday night, looking well and hearty. He reports the weather all along as something delightful. Speaking of mining matters, Mr. Moss spoke favorably of the future for hydraulic mining during the coming season. The company have built a dam for storing water for the Laura mine at Rock Creek. This will give them a feeling of greater surety in working next year. The primary object of his visit was to inspect the working of this mine, but he found it shut down for the winter before he arrived. The claim prospects well, but on account of the great scarcity of water this year, the actual returns have not been equal to anticipations. There is plenty of gold in sight. The water gave out about the first of August, but the dam that is being made will obviate such a contingency next year.

People up there are very anxious to see the Spokane & Northern get a franchise into that country, such a concession would really mean the commencement of a period of unexpected prosperity for the district. As if foreseeing this, Spokane men are trying to secure all the most valuable properties in the country and have already bought several claims on the Cattle River. There is quite a stir in the Okanagon new camp, several parties having come from the other side to winter, and two or three claims have been bonded already, but no sales made. Parties owning good properties are standing in their own light by asking too much for them from new comers. The Wide West and Brown Bear mines intend working all winter. A number of families have settled in the Cattle River District, several white ladies having come up to live with their husbands. To these settlers, the lack of roads and mail communication is keenly felt, but nevertheless their presence has given the country a certain amount of impetus. A lot of fruit trees have been planted in some districts, and the experiment promises to be very successful in results if an opinion is to be formed on the healthy appearance of the trees.

It is expected that Spokane Fall men will next spring build a mill to crush the quartz of the Cariboo Mining company, or that of any mine that may be offered them. In fact, arrangements have already been made to this end.

There has been some development in the carbonates mine, which experts pronounce equal to any found in Leadville. Mr Moss brought down with him several samples which look rich. They will be duly tested, but in the meantime the owners feel so confident from present results that they have determined to push developments during the winter.

ALASKA MINES.

What Mr. L. Radovitch a Practical Expert has to Say About Them.

Mr. L. Radovitch, of San Francisco, an experienced miner and mining engineer, returned from Alaska on the City of Puebla. Mr. Radovitch was in early days a fortune hunter in the gold camps of British Columbia and among other places where fickle fortune smiled transiently upon him was Leach river near Victoria, where he took out about $1100 in a few week's work. Since that time Mr. Radovitch has been in many gold camps, and no doubt has met with the usual ups and downs of a miner's life. At present he conducts a business at 306 Kearney street, making and dealing in mining machinery of all kinds. But like all other gold-hunters, the love for mining still clings to him and he generally has half a dozen ventures on hand, "on the side" as it were. He buys, prospects, operates and sells mines, and at present has large interests in Bullion district, Nevada, and in Alaska.

To a representative of the TIMES, Mr. Rodavitch says, that he is more than satisfied with the prospects of Alaska gold and silver mining. During the year a great deal of prospecting has been done, and several discoveries of considerable importance were made.

At Silver Bow Basin, which is a hollow among mountains containing an immense area of gravel deposit, mixed with the wash from decomposed ledges above, the Newell Company have constructed a tunnel 2600 feet in length, and have still 200 feet more to go to tap the basin. This tunnel will in reality be an enormous sluice box below the surface of the basin and somewhere near bedrock. A shaft will be sunk to connect with the tunnel, and then with the water brought from the hills the work of running all that gravel and dirt through the gigantic sluice box will begin. It is one of the "biggest things" in mining at present being prosecuted on the Pacific coast. There is, according to the moderate estimate of competent men, millions in that hole, and all of it can be taken out.

The Pugh Co., whose quartz claim looks down into the basin, cleaned up over $50,000 in a six months run with ten stamps. Operations have stopped for the season.

Mr. Radovitch is the owner of claims adjoining the Pugh company. Some years ago he had sixty tons of rock shipped to San Francisco, which yield $94 per ton in free gold and sulphurets. Archy Campbell, on a property adjoining, and with a Dodge mill, this year crushed out $2800 from free gold quartz, and had seventeen tons of concentrates, from which $4000 was taken in San San Francisco.

At Sheep Creek, four and a half miles below Juneau, three good silver claims show prospects going from 120 oz. to 30 oz. The owners are running tunnels and sinking shafts. The best claim is the Silver Queen, from which Mr. Radovitch has quartz showing native silver in nuggets. The ledges are from 18 inches to 2 and 3 feet wide.

Bremner's Bay is thirty miles north of Juneau. Here the German company, which got nipped in the Bear's Nest, has decided to look for the money they dropped in Mrs. A. Major's aprocrophal habitation. The company has worked forty men all summer, running tunnels, building outhouses, residences, etc. This company, which is understood to have behind it some of the financial grants of the old countries, paid $80,000 for their properties here. A company of Greeks also own more valuable locations in this district.

At St. James Bay, L. Nadeau is the active head of a company that gives evidence of knowing what it is about. Mr. Nadeau comes from Chippewa Falls, Wis. The company owns the Ocean Wave, the Lilly and other fine properties. Specimens from the top have prospected 64 to 70 oz. silver. The vein is 110 feet wide, the rock containing galena, gold and silver. The walls are of slate and gouge accompanying porphery and limestone. An assay has yielded $96.71 as an average of 34 tests. All the natural advantages, such as water power, wood, navigable water, are adjacent to the mines. An island in the bay is also mineral bearing and several claims are being prospected with encouraging results.

In Silver Bay district, near Sitka, assessment work has been done on the Stewart, Haley & Melitich, Last Chance and other claims.

The Suadisliane and Sundrum districts also send good reports. From the latter Mr. Reid has twelve tons of rock to ship to San Francisco for a test.

The City of Topeka brought down $30,000 in bullion from the Treadwell mine, 6,800 cases and 400 barrels salmon and 400 sacks of concentrates.

Beautiful Women.

The tragical efforts of Wisdom's Robe-line as a beautifier and preserver of the complexion have been attested by thousands of leading ladies of society and the stage. It is the only article ever discovered which gives a natural and beautiful tint to the complexion, removing tan, sunburn, freckles and all roughness of the face and arms, leaving the skin soft, smooth and velvety. All remarks on its delightfuly cooling and refreshing properties, a distinction not found in any other similar article known. D. F. Campbell, agent.

MARTIN-NEWBURY.

A Well-Known Young Couple Join Hands For Life—Many Presents.

No. 8 Simcoe street, the residence of Mr. Wm. Newbury, was the scene last evening of the marriage of Mr. H. J. Martin, with Rithet & Co., to Miss Jessie, eldest daughter of Mr. Wm. Newbury. Both parties are well and favorably known in Victoria, and their many friends are to-day extending congratulations. The ceremony was performed by Rt. Rev. Bishop Cridge in the presence of only a few of the most intimate friends of the contracting parties. Mr. J. G. Wilson supported the groom and the bride was attended by her three sisters, who were attired in elegant and tasteful costumes of white. The bride wore white silk, with lace and orange blossoms. After the ceremony a bridal supper was partaken of, and the health of the happy pair drank by those assembled. Below is a partial list of the presents received by Mr. and Mrs. Martin:—

Bedroom set, Mrs. Mason and her boarders; Silver tea service, R. P. Rithet & Co's staff; large mirror, Mr. C. W. Newbury; 2 Napkin rings, C. Bunting; Silver salt-cellars in case, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Young; China tea set, Mr. W. Newbury; Parlor lamp, Mrs. Bunting; Handsome oak sideboard, Jesse Cowper, Esq.; Silver fruit dish, John Weiler & Sons; Piano, Mr. J. C. Newbury; Silver Cake dish, J. Auld Wilson; Silver slice and fork in case, Mrs. Fred Williams; Silver castor, Miss Jane Newbury; Cheque, Mr. J. E. Martin; handsome secretaire, Mr. Ed. Airy Bradford; elegant Japanese screen, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Webster, New Westminster; silver fruit dish, Miss Edith Newbury; silver berry dish, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Jones; silver set of carvers, Mr. E. A. Morris; marble clock, Mrs. J. F. Martin, Bradford, England; Scheld biscuit jar and tidy, Miss C. Thomas; cheque, Miss Cowper; vase, Mrs. Robert White; silverware, Miss Bunting, Portland, Or.; lemonade set, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Broderick; silver salt cellars, Miss Hattie Newbury; pair footstools, Mrs. Donald; cheque, Mr. W. C. Martin; pair water color paintings, Mr. and and Mrs. T. Bamford; lemonade set, Mrs. T. G. Mason; Scheld pickle jar, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Powell; Japanese vases and hand-painted toilet mats, Miss Martin, Bradford, England; pair vases, Miss Maude Bunting; mirror, Mr. Keith Middleton; set of berry dishes, Mr. and Mrs. R. Rennie.

WHAT IS MUCH NEEDED.

A Market Garden for Victoria—Mr. Jensen's Enterprise in this Direction.

Just what a market garden really is the average Victorian may know, but has no present experience of. His early vegetables he gets from California, after a long sea voyage, in the course of which they have become somewhat stale. His supply in season he gets from Chinamen gardeners, whose mode of producing vegetables is not altogether in accord with the most delicate appetites, were it more widely known; nor are Chinese ranches likely to become popular resorts for persons seeking the pure country air, laden only with the perfume of flowers and sweet smelling herbs.

A market garden capable of supplying all kinds of produce, cultivated by white men, and on the best agricultural principles, has long been a necessity. Mr. Jensen has decided to fill that necessity, to which end he has secured about 13 acres of good agricultural land on Wilkison road, about four miles out of town, from which he purposes to compete with California in the matter of early vegetables and delicacies. This garden will be conducted only on the best possible basis for which it is intended, will be worked by whitemen, and those only who have experience in such work. The land has already been put under cultivation, a very good well has been dug, and a windmill pump erected, by which to irrigate the land in dry weather.

A large hot house, for forcing purposes. From here citizens will be able to procure early vegetables, tomatoes, cucumbers, etc., by the 1st April, possessing two all-important recommendations—freshness and cheapness. These are the two facts the prudent housekeeper looks at. At present she has to submit to the imported article or purchase from the Chinaman. Both means are distasteful to her, and the present enterprise promises to obviate this. Thus, as a beginning has already been made, Victoria will have her own early vegetables and garden produce next spring. Mr. Jensen, who has placed a thoroughly experienced man in charge, is pushing the undertaking with all his energy. He feels the necessity for such an institution, having himself been a hotel keeper for a great number of years during which he was in a position to learn the approximate consumption of vegetables in Victoria.

In this connection, Mr. Jensen thinks there should be a public market in Victoria, and feels that the by-law proposing its establishment will meet with success. There are lots of men with small holdings outside the city who cannot peddle from door to door like the Chinamen, but whose wares are infinitly superior. Mr. Jensen's enterprise will make a new era in this industry in Victoria.

Mr. Jensen proposed to name his new enterprise "The Occidental Market Garden" after the Occidental hotel, which he has had for so many years.

LAST OPPORTUNITY.

Mr. Seward, the Eminent N.Y. Optician, Preparing to Leave for Home.

Having faithfully promised to be in New York by Christmas, and being obliged to stop for a few days at Portland, Denver, St. Louis, Cincinatti and Washington, Mr. Seward will leave Victoria

Thursday, December 4th.

The prospects are that Mr. Seward will not have time to finish all the work now in sight, before leaving, but if all those intending to call will do so without further delay, he will make the test and finish what he can and send the balance from New York.

Mr. Seward's success has been complete. Hundreds of Victorians have been benefited by his superior skill in adapting glasses, and no failures have been reported.

Mr. Seward's services are in great demand wherever he goes, and it will probably be several years before he will reach this coast again.

Dr. McNaughton Jones, Dr. Milne Dr. Garrow, Postmaster N. Shakespeare, Collector A. R. Milne and hundreds of others now wearing Mr. Seward's glasses speak of the work in the highest terms.

A record of the test and degree of the glasses given in each case is kept on the books for future reference, so that in case of accident, any person can have their glasses duplicated by addressing F. D. Seward, Box 3,567 New York.

LOMBARDY'S IRON CROWN.

A Regal Ornament Over Fifteen Hundred Years Old.

When Napoleon I. was crowned King of Italy at Milan, in 1805, he placed the iron crown of the Kings of Lombardy upon his head with his own hands, exclaiming: "Dieu me l'a donné, gare a qui la touche!" "(God has given it to me, beware who touches!") This, according to Scott, was the motto attached to the crown by its ancient owners.

The crown takes its name from the narrow iron band within it, which is about three-eighths of an inch broad and one-tenth of an inch in thickness. Tradition says it was made of one of the nails used at the crucifixion of Jesus, and was given to Constantine by his mother, Helena, the discoverer of the cross, to protect him in battle. Afterward it was used at the coronations of the Lombard kings, primarily at that of Agilulfus, at Milan, in the year 591.

The crown is now kept in the Cathedral of Monza. The outer circuit is composed of six equal pieces of beaten gold, joined together by hinges, and set with large rubies, emeralds and sapphires on a ground of blue gold enamel. Within the circuit is the iron said to have no speck of rust upon it, although it has been exposed for over 1,500 years.—Jewelers' Weekly.

Where Genius Didn't Work.

He was just a plain tramp, unadulterated with soap, and he carried over his shoulder a wooden snow-shovel several sizes too big for him. He pulled the bell in a business-like way, and when she opened the door he said: "Are you a Christian?" "Yes," (in surprise) "And do you believe that honest, earnest endeavor should be rewarded?" "Ye-es." "Heretofore I've had a large and lucrative practice in my profession, but this year the elements are against me. I know there's no snow on the premises, but it's going to rain this afternoon and rain hard. Now, I'll come back and shovel the rain off your sidewalk for a quarter if you'll give me ten cents advance money. Is it a go?" "Yes, it's a go," she said, as she slammed the door in his face. "And they say that genius and tact win every time," he sighed, as he shuffled down the stoop.

GEORGE WAS HONEST.

How a Chicago Man Made His Wife Feel Decidedly Cheap.

A young married woman on the North side suddenly grew suspicious of her husband, who before his marriage had been "one of the boys," and recently she determined to catch him. Monday, says the Chicago Tribune, he told her he had to go to the lodge.

"That is only his excuse," she said to herself. "He'll not fool me this time."

As soon as he was around the corner she was after him in a cab. The husband, oblivious of the espionage he was under, went straight to the lodge hall. The cab was pulled up where a view of the hall entrance was secured, and there watch was kept.

"He will be down soon," repeated the wife to herself, "and then I will catch him as he sneaks away."

At ten o'clock lodge was over, and the husband came down with the other members. The "shadow" in the cab was alert to catch every word.

"Come, George," she heard some one say, "let's have a drink before you go home."

"Not to-night," she next heard in reply. "I must go straight home. My wife did not seem well, and I am anxious about her."

Then the husband started off homeward at a brisk walk.

"Whip your horse," the now crestfallen wife exclaimed frantically to the cabby. "I must get home before he does."

The welcome the husband received that night was a surprise to him. "This seems," he said, "like old times."

LIGHT-WEIGHT BREAD.

How a Dishonest Baker Was Betrayed by Honest Polly.

It occurred in war times in Charleston when that city was under martial law, says the St. Louis Republic. Just then flour was scarce and several of the bakers succumbed to temptation and made short-weight bread. This came to the ears of the authorities and the provost-marshal was armed with a pair of scales and sent around to the bakeshops early every morning to weigh the bread. All short-weight bread found was confiscated. This had a good effect and after a few confiscations the provost-marshal usually found all things regular. One morning one of the bakers received the usual call from the marshal and his bake was taken from the oven and weighed and found correct to an ounce. But during the night this man had surreptitiously baked a quantity of light-weight bread and stowed it away under the counter. Just as the marshal and his detail were leaving the shop a pet parrot perched upon the top of a big cage called out: "Look under the counter." The marshal did so, discovered the light-weight bread, and carted it away. The man was so mad at his parrot that after the soldiers had gone wrung his neck and threw him out into the gutter. But Polly was not dead by any means. In a few moments he opened one eye, ruffled up his feathers and staggered about until he came upon the carcass of a dead dog. Polly cocked his eye at the defunct canine and then said: "Say, partner, did you say any thing about that bread?"

UNIVERSAL STOVES AND RANGES ARE THE CHEAPEST AND BEST.

Health demands pure air. Heating by warm air brought from a source outside the apartment to be heated is undoubtedly the nearest approach to nature's method that is possible. The is the product of years of careful thought and experiment and embodies the best results of modern Sanitary Heating. The dome, being constructed of steel, is guaranteed to be absolutely gas and dust proof. It is adapted for Dwelling Houses and Public Buildings.

NELSON NOTES.

Items of Interest From the Miner—A Quiet Week.

The Chinese on 49 and Bird creeks are laying in supplies for the winter, paying for the same in as nice looking dust as was ever washed out of gravel. The gold is coarse, flat, and worn smooth, indicating that it had traveled some distance. Will there be a placer boom in the spring?

The discovery of reputed good placer ground over on the headwaters of the Salmon has caused not a little excitement at Nelson. Old placer prospectors and miners like the looks of the gold brought in by John Loge, and say that they will chance it in the spring. Others, again, claim that if the ground is good in the spring, it is just as good this fall, and act accordingly.

All reports from Goat river district are encouraging. "Jap" King's Alice is said to be quite a showing for a mine. He has a tunnel in 55 feet, and when run 100 feet farther it will tap the ledge at a depth of 100 feet. Open cuts show the ledge to be of uniform width, with a pay streak from 2½ to 3 feet in width. The ore is galena, assaying from $40 a ton up in silver with from 40 to 60 per cent lead. Mr. King has built comfortable quarters and has four men at work. Other claims in the district look well, also; but none have had more than the assessment work done on them. Next spring a mining recorder will be appointed for the district, which is nothing more than fair, as prospectors should not be compelled to make the outlay necessary in traveling long distances to make records.

Little of interest is reported this week from Hot Springs district. Part of the machinery for the Skyline has been packed up to the mine, and the boiler is being placed in position.

A session of the county court was held at Nelson on the 13th, Judge Spinks presiding. The only case on the docket was that of the Eagle Creek Gold Mining Company against Isaac Holden for over-payment of wages.

A careful compilation of statistics shows that there is not half enough "grub" in Ainsworth and Nelson to last through the winter. Even if the freight at Kootenay station is all got through—which is doubtful—provisions will run short before spring. Who is to blame?

A disagreement as to the time allowed for dinner has occasioned a slight difficulty at the reclamation works. The contractors claiming that ¾ of an hour was long enough, owing to the shortness of the days; on the other hand the men claimed that an hour was little enough, owing to the laborious character of the work. They agreed to disagree, foreman Lee and some of the men quitting.

While a building boom has not actually struck Nelson, considerable is being done in the way of erecting new buildings and finishing up old ones.

QUEEN CHARLOTTE ISLANDS.

Continuance of Mr. Bulfinch's Description of the Place—Finis.

Mr. J. T. A. Bulfinch in the Port Townsend Leader, has been giving to the world a well written sketch of the Queen Charlotte Islands. Concluding his narrative, he says:—

These islands abound in mineral, and close to our house is a vein of antimony, three inches wide, nicked in many places by the Indians knives, where they have cut out balls for their guns when short of lead.

I have seen fine gold quartz specimens, exhibited by the natives, purporting to come from the western or ocean side of the islands, but at that time it was dangerous to go there, and even now I expect that the Gold Harbor Indians are bad. These islands are serrated with high ridges running east and west, approaching the shores either side so closely as to leave but small fractions of land here and there that could be farmed. Skidegate and some points on the northern end at Graham and Moresby Islands may be an exception.

There are no deer, therefore no panthers or wolves, but bears are plentiful, as also mink, wolverines, land otter, and, I think, foxes. On the west coast are certain bays frequented by sea otter. These people don't seem to care as much for hunting as aborigines usually do. Fishing is their principal means of subsistence. The cod and halibut banks of Queen Charlotte will some day be utilized and be a source of wealth. The halibut is small, but very juicy and fat, and the cod, both right cod and black, the very finest, and when these hidden banks are fully developed, will be found in great quantities.

Large sections of country have an eruptive volcanic appearance. Hot springs abound, some of which the Indians use, in whose virtues they have great faith. Wonderful stories are told of cures of rheumatism, sores and other troubles. In one place there is a spring some distance from shore, where at low water the salt water bubbles and emits a smoke. This is very popular, and here the lame and halt repair, and here the Haidah belles and beaux exhibit the latest fad in nose and ankle rings, armlets, etc.

Is it possible they have a kind of politics? Their wise men differ in opinion regarding tribal or village regulation; at one time, long ago, a pretender made great trouble claiming to be the genuine chief or king.

During our stay there, an emancipation of the slaves took place—in other words they were all engrafted into the tribe, and endowed with all rights attaching to such conditions which were, it seemed to us, the acquisition of Hudson Bay blankets, whiskey and happiness. They are very patriotic, and it is just immense to observe the air they assume when speaking of other tribes; nothing can equal it except, perhaps, a Chinaman's reference to a white man.

They are a wonderful people and will repay a close study.

The wind at length chopped around to the north, and Cit steering, we bade good-bye to his "big town," and soon with a close reefed blanket, were darting toward home. Cit meanwhile as he plied his paddle, humming some melancholy thing, perhaps a farewell that gave us the blues, so we sat silent, the villain singing away, no doubt thinking we were deeply affected. I have heard better vocalism, but seldom any more expressive. He was quite proud of his musical attainments, but is doubtless now the boss of a corner fire and takes grave counsel on tribal affairs with other free-holders.

An imp of darkness to all others, we were always the best of friends, and it really appeared to gratify him to perform any act to show his esteem. Good-bye "Cit-Coon."

FROM THE CAMPING GROUNDS.

His Condition Causes Alarm on His Return.

A well known young man in Toronto left in August last, to take a vacation; and with some others went north to camp, where sport was plentiful. He returned to Toronto when camp was broken up in September; but arrived in such a condition as to cause alarm to his relatives and friends.

He was confined to his home for a few days before he felt the necessity of a physician. The family doctor was summoned, and at almost a glance took in the patient's condition and ailment, saying, "Mr. H—— you must not attempt to do any office work for two months to come." He prescribed for him and left.

This was unwelcome and dreadful intelligence for Mr. H——, who felt that the manager of his company might find it necessary to put some one in his place. The manager was duly notified of Mr. H——'s illness, and kindly granted him further leave of absence, which was gratefully appreciated by him.

On the evening of the same day on which the physician had been called in, a very dear friend, Mr. F——, called to see Mr. H——, hearing he was ill. Mr. F—— was greatly surprised to find his friend so weak, nervous and downspirited; and after hearing what the doctor had said, and having ascertained what he prescribed, spoke as follows:

"Mr. H—— let me kindly say that you made the first error when you left for the North to camp. You were not at that time sufficiently robust and strong for such work as camp life involves. Before you left I noticed with alarm your appearance and condition; but now to the point my dear fellow; will you allow me as one who takes a great interest in your health and welfare to offer a suggestion, which if acted on, will surely restore you to strength, vigor and new life, long before these nauseous drugs and pills can do so? The remedy I would suggest is Paine's Celery Compound; I have had occasion to test it myself, and know of others who have used it and the result thus far is ample to prove that it is what you now require. I am quite certain that your good mother and sisters will not object, even in the face of your doctor's learned opinion."

"You are weak, broken down, sleepless and irritable, you say; as well as very nervous; this makes your condition serious, but not worse than I was before I used this great remedy. You may go on for weeks under the care of a physician taking his pills and drugs, yet you are never sure of having the root of the trouble eradicated. Paine's Celery Compound is the only remedy that can meet your case, and as for efficient results, I am willing to pledge my life if necessary."

Mr. H—— with good sense used Paine's Celery Compound, and in less than ten days was able to walk out for exercise; and in two weeks was strong enough to resume his office work. His rapid and thorough cure was a marvel, not only to his friends, but to his family physician as well, who was led to see (against his will) the great medicinal value of Paine's Celery Compound.

Paine's Celery Compound is now recommended by Mr. H—— to any of his friends or relatives who may be ill. He always reminds them of his own sickness and quick restoration of health.

BOARD OF ALDERMEN.

Regular Weekly Grist of the Civic Mill—Business Transacted.

The regular weekly meeting of the board of aldermen was held at the City Hall last evening the mayor being in the chair, and all the aldermen except Alderman Smith present. Clerk Dowler, after reading the minutes of the previous meeting, submitted the following

COMMUNICATIONS.

From T. R. Smith drawing attention to a bad drop in the sidewalk near the Hudson Bay company's store.—Referred to committee.

From Wm. Renwick in reference to trees in the center of the sidewalk on Hillside avenue. Referred to committee.

From the Henderson Directory Co., promising to place house numbers in place during the next ten days. Filed.

From Ed. McCroskeil in reference to bad drainage of Superior street and asking the same to be remedied.—Ald. Harrison explained that until the system of sewerage was complete no drainage could be given. On motion matter was referred to the street committee.

From M. J. Conlin asking for the position of tax and licenses collector.—Tabled.

From R. B. Esnouf asking for the position of assistant tax collector.—Tabled.

From T. Moody asking a portion of Amelia street for building purposes.—Granted.

From Robt. Carter asking for position of tax collector.—Tabled.

From Ed. Mohun, in reference to extension of time for reception of tenders for sewerage pipes to the middle of January next, to enable shippers to compete.—Suggestion adopted.

From J. F. Smith, asking for an electric light on Douglas street, corner of Broughton street, for the benefit of St. Andrew's congregation.—Referred to committee.

From P. Æ. Irving, enclosing a letter from Hon. Justice Drake suggesting a change in the manner of entering charges in the charge book.—Referred to committee.

From R. P. Rithet & Co., in reference to bad state of sidewalk on Wharf street, and asking that the same be repaired, or an allowance be made to them for improving the same.—Referred to committee.

From Hon. Justice Crease, in reference to the drainage of Pentrellew property.—Referred to street committee.

From Thomas Small, asking for the position of superintendent of the construction of the sewerage system.—Applicant to be notified position is already filled.

From Eberts & Taylor, in reference to James Bay flats.—Filed.

From the Sheriff of Victoria, enclosing bill for services rendered.—Referred to committee for payment.

NEW BY-LAWS.

Ald. Harrison moved the first reading of an amendment to the by-law dealing with the width of streets.

DELUGE ENGINE HOUSE.

The new tenders for the purchase of the Deluge fire engine house on Yates street were opened. Two were before the board, one from S. M. Hartman, offering $10,250, and one from J. J. Austin, offering $13,509.—Both were declined.

REPORTS.

The street committee recommended the purchase of 100 yards of rock at 50 cents a yard, and the building of a stretch of sidewalk on Discovery street.—Adopted.

TAX COLLECTOR.

Ald. Vigelius drew attention to the fact that bonds from the gentleman appointed to the position of tax collector had been asked for, and he would like to know if such bonds had been furnished. It was reported by the clerk that no bonds had been put up.

It was agreed then to appoint another collector at another meeting.

DRILL SHED.

The mayor spoke of the fact that a bonus of $5,000 had been asked for to aid in the erection of a $30,000 drill shed.

Ald. Wilson—Not much. I have before told you how I feel in the matter. Let the provincial government furnish the money, as they have the ordering of the forces to different parts of the province. I do not see why the city should aid the Dominion Government, as that government does not do much for us. Take, for instance, the requests for a rebate in eastern dues on fire apparatus, etc. Col. Prior seems to be able to do nothing but talk about drillsheds. He knows the state of our finances, and if he wants money, let him go around with a subscription list. I will give my share, but it will be a small one.

Discussion ensued, the tone of which showed that the balance of the board had the same feeling in the matter as did Ald. Wilson.

DISINTERRING CORPSES.

Ald. McKillican drew attention to the horrible practices of Chinese, who disinterred decomposing bodies, and removed the flesh therefrom. He thought that something ought to be done, and done promptly in the matter, as disease was apt to be spread.

Ald. Wilson coincided, and added that the custom of storing the bones in the city in undertaking establishments. This should also be stopped. He also suggested that the Chinese be instructed to procure burying grounds of their own. Several strong reasons for this were given.

The matter was referred to the cemetery committee and the city barristers.

The board then rose.

SUPPOSED STAGE ROBBER.

Mr. Tingley Gives Credit to Whom Credit is Due.

VICTORIA, B.C., Nov. 27.—I do not claim any credit for the arrest of Rowland, the supposed stage robber, at Ashcroft on the night of the 15th November, nor do I have any desire to claim the award of $2000 offered by the Government should the prisoner be found guilty, nor would he, Rowlands, have been arrested by my instructions that night had it not been for the information given by Johnny Nelson and Doc English. S. TINGLEY.

Too Large a Stock.

Lange & Co.'s eastern agent, through a mistake, sent them more goods than they ordered. Not having room to display or to store the surplus amount of goods on hand, they will sell them for almost cost for the next two weeks, so as to dispose of them as quickly as possible. n1-1m

A Social Event.

Social circles are looking forward to an event which takes place on the 4th December in a bal masque to be given by Miss Beeton. An unusually large number of people have received invitations, for Miss Beeton's personal acquaintance is very extensive, from the fact of her popularity and her readiness to assist in any good work. Masks and dominoes will be doffed at 11 o'clock.

Police Notes.

A report circulated in the city this morning that a highwayman had been caught, induced a large number to attend the police court, but disappointment was their lot, as one drunk, Thos. Nugent, charged with assault, and Ah Wing, charged with stealing an umbrella, made up the docket. The drunk made no kick but paid his fine. Thos. Nugent pleaded guilty and was fined $15, while the Chinaman was sentenced to three months at hard labor.

B. T. Lang, who was sent up for trial yesterday for obtaining money under false pretences, elected to be tried by speedy trials this morning.

Sandbagged on the Street.

The police are a little reticent to place any reliance on the story told by Chas. O'Brey who claims that he was sandbagged last evening about 5:30. He was found at the corner of Blanchard and Chatham streets by city clerk Dowler who immediately communicated with the police, at about six o'clock. He was lying on the road side and had only left a saloon a few minutes before, at which place it is learned that he was pretty well under the influence of liquor. A slight scratch in the face was the only apparent injury he had received, and as to his alleged assailants he could give no clue as he was very changeable in his description of them.

A Dividend Declared.

At the half-yearly meeting of the Vancouver Coal Company held in London, England, on the 25th inst., at the office of the company, a provisional agreement, previously entered into by the directors with certain capitalists, was ratified by the shareholders. By this arrangement additional capital will be available for all desirable developments of the collieries on the lines lately inaugurated; for the employment of shipping especially adapted for coal conveying, and generally for extending the business of the company on a broader basis. A dividend of three per cent. on the paid up capital was declared, which is equivalent to six per cent. per annum, clear of the income tax.

Lived the Allotted Space.

At the ripe old age of nearly three score and ten years, the allotted space, Mrs. Magdalene Mann passed away last evening. Mrs. Mann was a much respected citizen of Victoria, where she has lived to see her family grow up to manhood and womanhood. She was a native of Wilton parish, Roxburghshire, Scotland, and leaves three daughters and four sons to mourn her death. Unfortunately there is only one son in Victoria to pay the last sad tribute to his mother, that is Mr. George Mann. Mr. James, of Muirhead & Mann, is unavoidably absent on business up country; Mr. Thomas Mann lives in Portland, Or., but will no doubt be over to attend the funeral, and Mr. William Mann is confined in the hospital in consequence of a bad accident a few days since. The daughters, Mrs. James Tuson, Mrs. Brethor, and Mrs. J. B. Lovell, are all here. The funeral will occur to-morrow, Friday, from her late residence, 11 Rae street.

St. Andrew's Day.

To-morrow will be St. Andrew's day, and it will be closed by local Scotsmen in a banquet at the Delmonico. Previous to adjourning to dinner, though, the members will assemble at their hall at 7:30, for the installation of office-bearers, who are: President, John Robertson; 1st vice-president, George Bishop; 2nd vice-president, Andrew Tolmie; treasurer, Donald McKay; secretary, John Murdoch; physician, Dr. Renwick; chaplain, Rev. Dr. Reid. The toast list for the dinner is full of promises of wit, wisdom and fun. There are the usual speeches, but they will be good old Scottish productions, and will be plenteously interspersed with good music. There is a feature in this programme which a short time ago was the subject of a very able and exhaustive discussion in the magazines, viz., the place the toast of the press should occupy on the list. Scotsmen have ever realized the fact of the "chiel takin' notes," and in this instance have put him immediately after the Lieutenant-Governor. A thoroughly good time is looked forward to, for Scotsmen have the faculty of enjoying themselves at home or abroad.

There's a patent medicine which is not a patent medicine—paradoxical as that may sound. It's a discovery! the golden discovery of medical science! It's the medicine for you—tired, run-down, exhausted, nerve-wasted men and women! for you, sufferers from diseases of skin or scalp, liver or lungs—its chance is with every one, its season always, because it aims to purify the fountain of life—the blood—upon which all touch at some point and sickness is. That medicine is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. The makers of it have enough confidence in it to sell it on trial. That is, you can get it from your druggist, and if it doesn't do what its claimed to do, you can get your money back, every cent of it.

A STARTLING REVELATION.

J. J. Daley, of this City, Charged With Bigamy—A Man's Terrible Crime.

Some six years ago a James J. Daley came to Victoria, and shortly afterwards started a fancy goods store. He took quite a prominent part in the Y. M. C. A. and was for some time its secretary. Time passed on and Mr. Daley became acquainted with Miss Gregg, daughter of Mr. A. Gregg, of this city, and after an engagement of some months was married to her. The pair lived happily together for a time, and two children were the fruit of the union. Latterly, however, Daley's eccentricities, to put it mildly, caused an estrangement, which resulted in a separation.

Some weeks ago Superintendent of Police Sheppard received a letter from a Mr. Daley, of Timoru, New Zealand, making enquiries for James J. Daley, describing Mr. Daley perfectly, the great destructive work being the fact that the left arm was off at the shoulder. The Superintendent at once communicated with Mr. Daley's people at New Zealand, and mentioned in the letter that Mr. Daley had married here and had a family. To his surprise he received another letter, dated Oct. 27th, from Daley's mother, stating that a wife and five children had been left by him in Timaru. The letter also stated that the Mrs. Daley who had been left destitute was at work as a servant for six shillings a week, trying to earn a living for herself and the five little ones so cruelly left destitute. The whole letter is most pitiful, the mother, Mrs. Norah Daley, while evidently trying to shield her son from the disgrace and punishment he so richly deserved, was full of sympathy for poor Miss Gregg, who had been so badly treated at the hands of the scoundrel. The letter also contained the portraits of Daley's wife and three of the children.

The superintendent also received shortly after another letter from Messrs. Smithson & Raymond, barristers and solicitors, of Timoru, asking if the parties interested for Miss Gregg were disposed to pay Mrs. Daley's expenses here to prosecute the bigamist, and also if Daley's estate could be available to obtain any financial assistance for his wife.

Supt. Sheppard sent for Daley and also for Mr. A. Gregg, and yesterday in the superintendent's room at the city hall Daley was confronted with the proofs of his perfidy. Beyond a slight paleness and the least quiver of the eyelid, not a sign escaped him. He did not deny the facts, however, and when Supt. Sheppard threatened him with arrest, he asked for 24 hours grace, promising to either make restitution as far as he was able, or to leave the country. Mr. A. Gregg will not prosecute Daley, as the charge of bigamy can not be laid unless Mrs. Daley of New Zealand is brought here, and to do this would cost hundreds of dollars. Already Mr. Gregg has been a financial loser by Daley, and he does not think it worth while to spend more money on him.

Mrs. Daley of this city (Miss Gregg), now tells a sad tale to her parents. The match was at the first objected to by them, and on this account she suffered in silence many wrongs which were inflicted on her by Daley, and only lately returned to her parental home, heartbroken and sorrowful.

Several times to-day Supt. Sheppard has called at Daley's store on Douglas street, but no trace of the man could be found. A young lad, in attendance at the store, said that he did not know where Mr. Daley was. A TIMES representative also called, and asked the lad if Mr. Daley was in. The lad replied "No." When asked where Mr. Daley stayed, the lad replied he did not know. The newsman fully believed the boy was not speaking the truth, judging from his way of answering, and meeting Superintendent Sheppard, asked that officer to again go to the store. He did so and under a rigid cross-questioning by the superintendent the lad admitted that Mr. Daley was in a little room in the shop. Supterintendent Sheppard and the newsman entered and found Daley lying on a cot. In answer to the Supt. he said he had not yet got a reply to make concerning the charges made by the letters. He could not see how he could have a wife and six children in New Zealand. The Superintendent remarked that only five children were mentioned. In answer to a straight question by Mr. Sheppard, as to whether he admitted the charges or denied them, Daley refused to reply.

Daley seems terribly broken down, and has the appearance of a man in great trouble.

Guessing Match.

To induce cash trade, Lange & Co., will have another guessing match this year. The gifts given are very elegant and valuable. There will be nine presents.

A Handsome Present.

Mr. W. R. Brown, of Brown Bros., has presented Captain John Dodd, of the schooner Maggie Mac, with a very handsome pair of marine glasses, which will be the finest of their kind in the sealing fleet. They are of remarkable focussing power and range, capable of distinguishing a boat as far out as fifteen miles at sea. They are finished in Morrocco and silver fittings and are of Lemaire's (Paris) famous make, and were imported direct from France. The outer case is also of Morrocco with a silver plate bearing the inscription "Captain John Dodd, from W. R. Brown, Victoria," on either side of which the symbol of the square and compass.

The Mystery.

The Boston Journal says: Mrs. Annie Abbott, a woman of slight build, who claims the same electric power that distinguished Lulu Hurst, of Georgia, gave a private exhibition of her peculiar strength at the Howard Athenæum before newspaper men on Thursday. She lifted six men while they lay on two chairs, using only the ends of her fingers as the motive power against the back of the chairs, and resisted the combined pressure of two men attempting at one time to lift her by her elbows from the floor, and at another time attempting to force her backward by pressure against a billiard cue which she held loosely in her hands while she stood poised on one foot.

FROM QUESNELLE.

Mr. Barker Reports Everything in Good Circumstances.

Mr. J. K. Barker arrived down from the Quesnelle district last night, and although he has no definite results to show for his claim yet, he reports everything in good circumstances. The South Fork claim in which he is interested is about half a mile in extent, and 150 to 200 feet deep. To get water in to work it, a ditch, fifteen miles in length, has been surveyed from a lake near Beaver lake, through the woods to the claim. Work was started on it about the beginning of October and some sixty feet have now been dug. It will take fully two years to complete this ditch, but next season it is expected to have four or five miles done and then there will be sufficient water available to go on working with.

Mr. Barker, like all the miners, complains of the lack of facilities which exists for getting in material for mining. This is the one thing that tends to keep the country back. Where the roads are most needed, there they are not. At present things have to be packed in over the most difficult portion of the road. Speaking of the leasing of land and water, the miners are of opinion, said Mr. Barker, that the two should be of equal duration. It takes two, sometimes three, years to get in water to work a claim. Then there only remain seven or eight years to use it, while ten of twelve years remain of the year lease. A lot of trouble is likely to ensue over this inequality.

Mr. Barker is down for the winter months.

Mr. J. Pumery is also down; he has a claim located near Mr. Barker, but will not prospect it before next spring.

Fast Time.

SUCH A JOKE!

Cameron has beaten himself this time. He's sold me goods $2.00 too cheap. I know it, because I priced the same line of goods at another store before going to Cameron's. Ha! ha! ha! ha! he! he! he! ho! ho!

THE JOKE IS

that our much tickled man has paid Cameron's usual price, which is always lower than elsewhere.

The Man that's Beat is the man that has been paying two prices so long that when he gets a fair deal he thinks it's all a mistake.

WHEN IT STRIKES HIM

that, instead of beating us $2.00 now he's been beaten heretofore on every trade, you'll see that laugh strikes him like colic. But he'll stick to us now he has tried us.
